

A diagram illustrating the Pythagorean theorem. It features a large square labeled A on the left. Inside the large square, there is a smaller square labeled B in the top-left corner. The remaining area of the large square is divided into two rectangles and two right triangles, which are used to prove the theorem.

$$B$$
$$A$$

$$a^2 + b^2 = c^2$$